and more!

Welcome to your Columbia Council of Neighborhoods monthly newsletter.

This is your space to stay connected to everything happening across CCN. Each month, we'll bring you updates from our general membership meetings, highlight the voices shaping our neighborhoods, and share opportunities for you to stay involved and make an impact.

May is here, and with it comes the full bloom of the work we've been planting together. Across Columbia, neighborhoods are coming alive. Gardens are thriving, community ideas are taking shape, and neighbors are showing up for one another in ways that continue to strengthen the fabric of our city.

Neighbor Spotlight

Adam Nagler | CCN President-Elect (2027 Term)

This month, we're highlighting Adam Nagler and his perspective as a neighborhood leader.

Adam represents Granby Mill Hill, a neighborhood he describes as cozy, walkable, and full of character.

With homes close together and a diverse mix of residents, it's a place where people genuinely connect.

Adam and his wife purchased their home in 2004 and, after years of renovations, moved in permanently in 2009. What keeps him grounded there is simple: the people. Strong relationships with neighbors have made the neighborhood feel like home.

He emphasizes that staying involved is essential. According to Adam, a resident's voice is one of the most powerful tools we have to shape the future of our communities. Engagement is what turns ideas into reality.

One thing he wishes more people knew about Granby Mill Hill is its accessibility. Despite being a tucked-away neighborhood with a single entry point, it offers walkable access to restaurants, entertainment, and recreation.

For Adam, a strong neighborhood is active and connected. It's a place where neighbors know one another, look out for each other, and create an environment where everyone feels seen, heard, and respected.
